Bikwa files counter assault case against Boity Thulo

Bikwa is charged with assault with intent to cause grievous bodily harm for allegedly throwing a glass at musician

“I have been through the most rough, emotional and difficult time the past few days regarding allegations against me of GBV”, reads the opening line in media personality Bujy Bikwa’s official statement as he finally broke his silence on charges of assault with intent to cause grievous bodily harm laid against him by musician Boity Thulo.

Bikwa is charged with assault with intent to cause grievous bodily harm for allegedly throwing a glass at Thulo, which resulted in two cuts on her lower lip and one just below her eye, during an argument at a Midrand hotel last week. ### Malema: Parents should put their children before 'ANC T-shirts'

EFF leader Julius Malema says parents should consider their children's future when deciding who to cast their vote for in the upcoming local government elections.

Addressing the community in Lekwa Teemane ward in North West, Malema told elders to follow his lead and not vote for the ANC, saying the party was no longer the same.

He claimed their children would "salute" them for making the decision to put them and their future first.

"I want my kids to salute me. When you leave kids in a rainy shack, what do you want them to do? We must say this nonsense stops with us," said Malema.

"The elderly must not feel bad for not voting for the ANC. It is no longer the same."

Malema said parents should not let older men take care of their children.

"We don't want kids to be going around sleeping with old men because they want money. We must put an end to that nonsense by making things easy for them.

Councillors must assist the people," he said

Last week, Malema urged young people to go to school and stop relying on SA Social Security Agency (Sassa) grants.

Malema said Sassa grants are not enough to provide for people, saying the youth must get an education to try to pull themselves out of poverty.
